

Do your actions cause starvation?
What is the future for the developing world?
What sort of development is sustainable?

THE GREAT DEBATE

presents

a day of discussion on

Development, Sustainability and Environment

10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Saturday 27th September

Leazes Room

Civic Centre

Newcastle upon Tyne

ADMISSION FREE

Admission to this event is free, but
PRE-BOOKING IS ESSENTIAL

Contact Ruth Murray, Local Agenda 21, Newcastle upon Tyne

0191 211 5633

Environmental Ideas in the 21st Century
What Future for the Developing World?
Sustainability Here and Now

Event Sponsored by

PEER REVIEW FOR EUROPEAN
SUSTAINABLE URBAN DEVELOPMENT

THE GREAT DEBATE

Development, Sustainability and Environment

Convened by Caspar Hewett, Dave O'Toole and Jon Bryan
Sponsored by Peer Review for European Sustainable Urban Development

Session 1: Environmental Ideas in the 21st Century

Chair: Dave O'Toole, The Great Debate

Speakers:

Derek Bell, Leverhulme Research Fellow in Politics, University of Newcastle

Joe Kaplinsky, Technology Analyst

Mary Mellor, author The Politics of Money: Towards Sustainability and Economic Democracy

Environmental ideas are taught in schools, discussed in the House of Commons and debated at world summits, but what does it mean to be an environmentalist today? This session will look at the impact of the environmental movement, what is behind the mainstreaming of environmental ideas and what consequences this has for the future.

Session 2: What Future for the Developing World?

Chair: Mo Lovatt, The Great Debate

Speakers:

Ceri Dingle, Director, WORLDwrite

Geoff Parkin, Lecturer in Sustainable Hydrology, Water Resource Systems Research Laboratory (WRSRL), currently working on Middle East water resources projects

Jan Simmonds, Christian Aid North East

The term sustainable development is defined as 'development which meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs' [Brundtland Report]. Where does this leave present generations? What can the developing world realistically aspire to?

Session 3: Sustainability Here and Now

Chair: Viv Regan, Assistant Director, WORLDwrite

Speakers:

Allen Creedy, Project Director, Peer Review for European Sustainable Urban Development (PreSud), Directorate of Enterprise, Environment & Culture, Newcastle City Council

James Heartfield, editor Sustaining Architecture in the Anti-Machine Age

Over the last decade work has been undertaken at international, national and local levels to advance sustainable urban development. The final session of the day will be a discussion about the benefits or otherwise of the sustainability paradigm in the context of the developed world. Contrasting views of sustainability will be offered by two prominent speakers on this important issue.